U.S. Supreme Court Takes Up the ACA

This week the U.S. Supreme Court held three days of oral arguments on the states' challenge to the Affordable Care Act. Twenty-six states, including Kansas, are included in this legal challenge. The arguments this week mark the first time in forty years that the Court held hearings on more than one day for a single legal challenge.

On day one, the Court heard arguments about the Anti-Injunction Act, which is a 19th century law that prohibits federal courts from ruling against tax provisions until they have taken effect. This was a debate about whether the Court has the authority to rule on the Affordable Care Act before the penalties for not buying health insurance go into effect in 2014. Initial indications are that all the parties want the Court to rule sooner rather than later on the Affordable Care Act.

The second day was the main event of the week, as the subject was the individual mandate. This provision of the law requires people who do not have health insurance through an employer or through Medicaid or Medicare to purchase insurance. The Affordable Care Act (ACA), in many ways, hinges on all Americans purchasing insurance in order to keep insurance costs as low as possible and to enforce provisions, such as eliminating pre-existing

Program

This month the Kansas Dental Association and the Delta Dental of Kansas Foundation announced the formation of KIND: The Kansas Initiative for New Dentists. Through the generosity of the Delta Dental of Kansas Foundation, KIND will provide two $50,000 grants to dental school graduates who set up practice in the "dental deserts" of the state. These are communities that do not have a dentist within 20 miles. Applications for the KIND program will be accepted until May 15.

Today marked the final day of arguments, and two subjects were discussed. First the Court heard arguments about the severability of the law. If the Court were to rule the individual mandate within the ACA is unconstitutional, it would have to determine which, if any, of the other provisions of the law would remain in effect. The second argument today related to the Medicaid expansion provision of the ACA. The law expands eligibility for the Medicaid program to all adults whose income is lower than 133% of the Federal Poverty Level. Under the current law, 100% of the cost of the expansion population would be covered by the federal government in 2014, and the federal payment rate would be reduced to 90% by 2017. The federal payment rate for the existing Medicaid populations is 60% in Kansas. The rate for the existing population would remain unchanged. The parties argued today about whether the requirement to add more adults to the Medicaid program amounts to coercion of the states to pay more money to expand Medicaid.

The Court expected to rule on all these arguments in June of this year.
