Dental Fear: What, Why and How

Colgate is offering a free webinar "Dental Fear: What, Why and How." The lecture will describe the characteristics and causes of dental fear and anxiety, as well as how to identify and manage patients with dental fear.

The webinar will be on Wednesday, August 10. Please note the timezone is not in the United States but the webinar will be archived.

Another opportunity: For those of you who are providing dental services for marginalized populations, dental anxiety can be a real issue. On Saturday, November 5th, as part of the OHK annual session, we will be offering a highly energetic and relevant workshop on providing dental services with trauma informed care. Mark your calendar and stay tuned for more details!

Kids who drink sugary sports drinks, risk cavities and obesity

In a recent study, researchers surveyed 160 children from four different schools. They found that while half of the children reported drinking sports drinks socially, 90 percent of them said taste was a factor in their beverage choice and only 18 percent drank them because they believed it would improve their performance. Dr. Paul D. Jackson says "Sports drinks are intended for athletes taking part in endurance and intense sporting events, they are also connected with tooth decay. High sugar sports drinks are unnecessary for children and most adults."

If your child is going to drink a sugary beverage, monitor how much he/she drinks. Sugary beverages should be consumed in moderation, while sipping water with fluoride.

Reserve our sugary drink display to learn how much sugar is in popular beverages your kids like to drink!
